Which of the following best describes you:

1 Do you agree that it is helpful for the DfES to issue guidelines to local authorities?
Yes No. 1/2 ANdt Sure
Comments: NOT SURE
The principle of guidance to Local Authorities is good, provided that it gives greater emphasis on safeguarding; which this document does not. There is still the possibility of an EHE child not becoming known to a Local Authority and if applicable unable to be safeguarded. The suggestion that children should have access to a full-time and suitable education will not be promoted through this guidance. A clearer definition of Section 7 of the Education Act 1996 would help.

3 Do you agree that the description of local authorities' responsibilities (paragraphs 2.5-2.11) is accurate and helpful?

Yes VNo Not Sure
Comments: NO
This description is not appropriate or helpful. Whilst the legal provision is clarified, there is no common understanding of the components / minimum standards of appropriate educational provision. How is reasonable progress to be measured without effective and realistic liaison between the LA and families? The wording in this paragraph does not mitigate towards developing these relationships. Whilst it is good that the LA must be satisfied, there are no criteria or benchmarking for this to be accomplished.
4 Do you agree that the section on contact with the local authority (paragraphs 3.4-3.7) is accurate and helpful?
Yes √No Not Sure
Comments: NO
The suggestions contained in these paragraphs do not reflect the ECM agenda, nor provide guidance on how LAs should engage with children and families. Whilst there are many successful examples of home education, the activities of Fred West & family in the early 90s, and the case prosecuted in Bristol Crown Court (Eunice Spry – see http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/england/gloucestershire/6449313.stm), appear to have been overlooked completely.

The comments in 3.11 are not consistent with the testing arrangements currently in place for schools. Having established that much of the parental activities are non-prescriptive, paragraphs 11-14 suddenly become prescriptive. How will the LA will be able to develop an informed view? In practice the LA has minimal powers to intervene or investigate, should concerns exist. There is no reference to children with SEN whose parents may wish to home educate. This means that the most vulnerable children of all may not be protected. The system proposed does not allow for the LA to be aware of all children home educated. Therefore it will be impossible for the LA to ensure that any special educational needs a home educated child may have can be considered.
6 Do you agree that the section on developing relationships (section 4) is useful?
Yes √No ,NotSure
Comments: NO
This paragraph is written from the perspective that the LA will be punitive rather than supportive in their earliest interventions. The section does not address the complexities that exist for LAs who are attempting to safeguard children; to work consistently with the 2002/2003 Education Acts, which address the child's needs and to establish and promote good working relationships with home educating families.
7 a) Are the suggested resources in section 5 and appendix 2 useful?
Yes yNo s Not Sure

Comments: NO
Flexi-schooling, however flexible for the parents, will present organisational difficulties and may increase absence, for schools and LAs. There is insufficient clarity about monitoring. Concerns are expressed at the difference between the authoritative view that is apparent but which does not easily relate to the general lack of direction in the document generally. There is insufficient evidence to suggest that work experience for home educated pupils happens to any sufficient degree.

Comments:

Paragraph 2.4 fails to protect children from the ill effects of parental rights and responsibilities. There must be an appropriate reference to the CME work, it is not acceptable to suggest that the duty described further in paragraph 2.6 does not apply.

Paragraph 3.1-3.3. If this work is to be taken seriously, it is essential that appropriate funding is available and that the nominated senior officer should be someone with safeguarding experience.

Paragraph 3.9 is inaccurate. The 1995 regulations were repealed by the 2006 regulations and the appropriate section is now section 8.

Guidance on a reasonable timescale should be included, and that this should be negotiated between the LA and the parents.

There is an assumption that all parents who are electing for home education are doing so from a sound basis. There are examples of known cases where this is not the case, consequently the opportunity to protect all children is compromised by the above assumption, however small few the number of worrying cases.

From this you will see that generally we are in agreement with the views submitted by The Association for Education Welfare Management and reenforcing the well made points.

Thank you for taking the time to let us have your views. We do not intend to acknowledge individual responses unless you place an 'X' in the box below.

Here at the Department for Education and Skills we carry out our research on many different topics and consultations. As your views are valuable to us, would it be alright if we were to contact you again from time to time either for research or to send through consultation documents?

/Yes

All UK national public consultations are required to conform to the following standards:

- 1. Consult widely throughout the process, allowing a minimum of 12 weeks for written consultation at least once during the development of the policy.
- 2. Be clear about what your proposals are, who may be affected, what questions are being asked and the timescale for responses.
- 3. Ensure that your consultation is clear, concise and widely accessible.
- 4. Give feedback regarding the responses received and how the consultation process influenced the policy.
- 5. Monitor your department's effectiveness at consultation, including through the use of a designated consultation co-ordinator.
- 6. Ensure your consultation follows better regulation best practice, including carrying out a Regulatory Impact Assessment if appropriate.

Further information on the Code of Practice can be accessed through the Cabinet Office Website: http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/regulation/consultation-guidance/content/introduction/index.asp

Thank you for taking time to respond to this consultation.

	Do you agree that it is helpful for the DfES to issue guidelines to local uthorities?
	✓Yes No No Not Sure
,	We consider that most local authorities would welcome clear guidance in line with the Every Child Matters and Safeguarding agenda. Current legislation as set out in the guidance without clear definitions of 'suitable', 'full-time' and whether LAs should take steps to gather evidence of educational progress unless alerted to concerns that an appropriate education is not being provided, would be helpful. The expectations of inspectors recently assessing our LA that Home Education should be monitored regularly and that data should be kept on the GCSE results of Home Educated children suggests that clarity is not currently in place and these guidelines appear not to provide greater clarity over these issues.
2 e	Do you agree that the description of the law (paragraphs 2.1-2.3) relating to lective home education is accurate and clear?
	✓ Yes
	Comments: As the response form from the Association for Welfare Management states 'The description of the law is accurate as it stands. However, while the law states that "no person shall be denied the right to education" in practice there is no mechanism to seek the young person's views. Recent DfES research demonstrates the benefits of seeking the voice of the child. The document describes education law but compromises the welfare of the child, particularly by not addressing the Every Child Matters agenda.' We agree with the above and endorse that LAs are encouraged to seek the opinions, feelings and views of young people in most other matters.

3 Do you agree that the description of local authorities' responsibilities (paragraphs 2.5-2.11) is accurate and helpful?

in a	Yes . ✓ No Not Sure
The That proof whe edu inte suit any not The uns situ	description does not clarify what the department's expectation of LAs is. It children and young people should make 'reasonable (educational) gress' is a premise with which we agree but how that is to be established en 'LAs have no statutory duty in relation to monitoring the quality of home cation on a routine basis' is a taxing concept, especially when they 'can rivene if they have good reason to believe parents are not providing a able education'. It is not clear from the guidelines whether LAs should do thing in relation to Home Education unless they receive evidence that it is appropriate. It experience of this authority is that we are contacted about the atisfactory nature of educational provision only in the case of acrimonious ations between ex partners. In particularly perplexing to try to establish exactly what the expectation on it is, when the law stands as described and yet LA inspectors ask whether keep data on the educational attainment in relation to GCSE passes for the Educated CYP and what we do to ensure safeguarding in this area.

At present Flexi-schooling is not encouraged within our LA. In our guidelines it is stated that this is an arrangement between the family and the school at which the child is on roll. Schools are encouraged to consider any such requests on the grounds of how such arrangements will promote educational progress and school standards at the end of key stages. As a result of this, currently the monitoring of any such arrangements is not carried out by the authority. It would be extremely difficult to determine whether a child's progress under such an arrangement was as a result of work done at school or as part of a flexible arrangement.. The inclusion of flexi schooling in the guidance could encourage greater numbers of parents to consider it. In our LA, the only recent example of a request to do so was when a class was had a job-share teaching pair and the family did not like one of the job-share partners and therefore wanted to educate their child at times when that teacher had responsibility for the class.

8 Please use this space for any other comments you wish to make about the guidelines

Comments: The issuing of guidelines provides an opportunity for clarity in the area of elective home education. Unfortunately there still seems to be lack of day to day practical guidance about how the ECM and safe-guarding agendas can be put in place whilst working within the law as it currently stands. Many LAs, ourselves included, tend to rely on the good will of many parents in allowing monitoring to take place or their lack of knowledge about what LAs are legally able to do in this area.

Aspirations about how LAs should work with local parent groups and provide information to Home Educating families does not sit well with Section 437(1) of the Education Act 1996, which states that LAs can only intervene if they have good reason to believe that parents are not providing a suitable education. How this can be established without duties to monitor home education has always been the challenge here and often parents challenge any attempts of LAs to find out about the education they are providing because they know that there are no statutory duties in relation to monitoring the quality of home education on a routine basis.

East Sussex Elective Home Education - Case Study

Pupil Yr 9 had become increasingly unsettled at school. behaviour was deteriorating and had been truanting. Following warning re poor attendance, so mother notified the school to say she was education at home, but would be also spending time travelling with father.

● is a Traveller child. Traveller Education Team was unhappy at the decision to home educate as they felt the family did not have "the knowledge, skills and resources to provide or deliver a full-time education that is efficient and suitable" (3.4). It was planned to intervene (monitor) immediately. Several home visits proved to be unproductive. On the last visit, two officers were kept at the boundary fence by aggressive dogs.

It subsequently transpired that was being groomed with mother's consent, by a Schedule 1 sex offender currently serving a prison sentence for an unlawful relationship with Prison monitoring picked this up and a Child Protection referral was made. is on the Child Protection Register and although has now moved to another County, her parents cannot home educate.

Conclusion:

It was through luck that we knew of the family and our Traveller Education Team raised concerns. If this child had been from a different ethnicity, she may have been unknown to the local authority and, away from regular contact with school and other professionals, would have been in danger of undetected abuse with the consent of her family.

Yet again there appears to be a conflict between our safeguarding responsibilities and the guidance as it exists in 2.7 "The local authorities have no statutory duties in relation to monitoring the quality of home education on a routine basis...... They can intervene if they have good reason to believe that parents are not providing a suitable education" We would ask the question – how do we know whether or not parents are providing suitable education or intervention is necessary unless we robustly monitor?

Traveller Education Team

Case Study demonstrating how Home Education can potentially result in safeguarding issues being missed

A family with children from a BME background who were purported to be educating at home. The colder children had been in schools but had been withdrawn to educate at home and younger children who had never been in school.

Family avoided all contact with services for the children and GP was the only real contact but this was in terms of parents needs not those of the children.

When the LEA tried to use the legal process and also involve social care the parent accused the LEA of not taking his religious and cultural needs into account. Social care then closed the case.

No agency had access to the children for long periods of time and the EWS worked through the court procedures following the school attendance order procedure.

The case was eventually referred as a child protection issue by a number of professionals and the police visited and removed the children to a place of safety. The conditions in which they found the children were appalling and neither child was receiving education or adequate care. The older were now adults but were removed to a secure hospital as there were concerns about their vulnerability.

Eventually the younger children were placed on a full care order in foster care and began to thrive although the youngest has several developmental delay and special educational needs. The whole process took a number of years and it is not possible to assess whether the difficulties currently experienced were caused or aggravated by the length of time he remained in the parents care.

New Key Indicator(s): Answer/Comments: When we met at the Essex Elective Home Education Conference in 2006, we were led to believe that following the research into Traveller Families in Home Education, there would be changes in the law to allow for compulsory registration of all families in Home Education and that LA's rights and responsibilities would be clarified in light of Every Child Matters and Children Missing in Education. Instead, we have been given guidelines that protect the parents' rights to provide Home Education, but allow the LA very little scope to monitor all parental provision of home education. Comments: It would seem sensible for parents to be required to register their intention to take responsibility for the education of their child by home education. Failure to incorporate this in the guidance would make it very difficult for LAs to accurately comply with paras 2.6 and 2.7 as there could be children being educated by parents who are not receiving suitable education unbeknown to the Local Authority.

It makes no sense to impose the new duty on LAs to identify children likely to missing a suitable education and then to state in 2.7 that the LA has no duty to

It makes no sense to impose the new duty on LAs to identify children likely to missing a suitable education and then to state in 2.7 that the LA has no duty to monitor the quality of the education. How is the LA to know that the education is suitable or not if they have no statutory duty to monitor? Paras 2.6 and 2.7 seem to contradict one another and need further clarification.

There are also Child Protection issues. Some parents/carers may not wish the existence of a child to be known to any Authorities. Whilst it is accepted that parents/carers wishing to hide a child will find a way to do so if they are determined to do it, the discovery of a child previously unregistered as being home educated will serve to alert others to an unusual situation.

4 Do you agree that the section on contact with the local authority (paragraphs 3.4-3.7) is accurate and helpful?

5 Do you agree that the section on providing a full-time education (paragraphs 3.11-3.14) – and in particular, the characteristics of provision (paragraph 3.13) – is accurate and helpful?

Here at the Department for Education and Skills we carry out our research on many different topics and consultations. As your views are valuable to us, would it be alright if we were to contact you again from time to time either for research or to send through consultation documents?
All UK national public consultations are required to conform to the following standards:
1. Consult widely throughout the process, allowing a minimum of 12 weeks for written consultation at least once during the development of the policy.
2. Be clear about what your proposals are, who may be affected, what questions are being asked and the timescale for responses.
3. Ensure that your consultation is clear, concise and widely accessible.
4. Give feedback regarding the responses received and how the consultation process influenced the policy.
5. Monitor your department's effectiveness at consultation, including through the use of a designated consultation co-ordinator.
6. Ensure your consultation follows better regulation best practice, including carrying out a Regulatory Impact Assessment if appropriate.
Further information on the Code of Practice can be accessed through the Cabinet Office Website: http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/regulation/consultation-guidance/content/introduction/index.asp

4 Do you agree that the section on contact with the local authority (paragraphs 3.4-3.7) is accurate and helpful?

Comments: The process of inspecting/monitoring EHE for Travellers is fraught with difficulty (access to children on site, in a trailer, the interest and willingness of LAs to engage with Travellers who aren't interested and for Travellers to engage with the LA). The reality is that Traveller pupils electing for EHE are not being monitored in the same way as non Traveller pupils for the reasons above. So much time, negotiation and effort is needed to follow through the recommended processes of home visits and monitoring the provision, when it is widely known that the reason behind their decision is to opt out altogether and not just opt out of school education.

Historically Travellers have only ever wanted their children to receive the basic education at Primary School, and not to continue their education past Year 7/8/9, so monitoring becomes irrelevant when they have in effect opted out of education under the pretence of providing their own. When Travellers opt for EHE, it must be remembered that they are at the opposite end of the scale to the parents who traditionally do this (university educated networkers, who pool their own resources). Travellers are the least educated, most marginalised and vulnerable ethnic group in the UK – they are not generally opting out because they want to provide their own education, they are following their traditional and entrenched culture of not going to school at secondary level. This should be understood from the start, and given this and the authority's responsibility to safe guard children, what protection can there be for children if Traveller
